

Energy efficiency and energy management:
tailored approach and roadmap for SMEs and other stakeholders

27 September 2018 – Brussels, CEN-CENELEC Management Centre

CEN and CENELEC are working with industry partners, the European Commission and other stakeholders to develop standards that facilitate the transition to a low-carbon economy. These standards guarantee the spread of best practices and provide energy users with the necessary tools to analyse and adapt their energy consumption patterns.

The CEN and CENELEC Sector Forum Energy Management (SFEM) invites you to participate in a one-day seminar on energy efficiency and management. The seminar intends to engage stakeholders and SMEs in the development of guidelines and processes integrating energy management with financing to increase benefits and reduce the risk of energy efficiency projects.

The expected outcome of the event will be to formulate recommendations which could enable SMEs and other interested stakeholders to benefit from the implementation of energy efficiency measures and the adoption of an energy management system.

WHY?

The European industry and SMEs play a crucial role in meeting the 2030 climate and energy policy objectives. They support the implementation of policies to achieve the set targets and drive technology progress in low-carbon, clean and energy efficient product development worldwide.

SFEM analyses the main standardization needs of relevant stakeholders along the supply chain. Simple, Transparent and Standardized are the keywords driving the whole energy efficiency process from value generation (energy audit) to value capturing (Measurement & Verification, M&V).

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

SMEs, industrial associations, national Energy Agencies, energy service suppliers, financial institutions, policy makers and the standardization community.
